PANIC ON A STEAMBOAT.

THE NEWBURGH ON FIRE IN THE HUDSON

RIVER

A DISASTER AVERTED BY THE PROMPT ACTION OF THE CAPTAIN-THE STEAMER RUNS INTO A PIER AT FIFTY-EIGHTH-ST. AND THE FLAMES ARE PUT OUT-NO ONE HURT.

The forethought, calmness and courage of Captain James Beattie, of the river steamer Newburgh, averted last evening what might easily have been one of the most fatal steamboat fires and Floridas and "290s" that committed such destrucin the history of river navigation. The screwsteamboat Newburgh, belonging to the Homer Ramdess Transportation Company of Newburg, months ago to obtain the views of the members and carrying freight and passengers between that place and New-York, took fire last night while on er up-river passage, and only by the courageous efforts of the captain and crew and the prompt aid of the river fre squads was she saved from destruction. The boat left Pier No. 35 North River, at Franklin-st., at 5 o'clock. dry 4goods, groceries, miscellaneous stores and other general merchandise; about sixty passengers and a crew of thirty-three under the command of Captain James Beattie and Chief Officer Merritt Directly the boat started the passengers crowded on to the upper deck, enjoying the beauty of the night and the scenes along the river side; leaving the cabins and saloons, which were under the main deck, almost des rted. The boat had been under way only half an hour, when, as she was passing Thirtieth-st., a young man rushed to the upper deck and exclaimed that a fire had broken out in the forecabin. Some of the young man's friends merely laughed and persuaded the other passengers that he was playing a joke on them. Chief Engineer John Caplis heard of the report, but took no heed of it at first. A few minutes afterward, however, it occurred to him as a matter of precaution to look into the cabin. What he saw there caused him to rush wildly out, sounding an alarm that penetrated to every part of the boat. The whole of the after part of the fore cabin was ablaze. Caplis tried to get into the cabin, but was forced back, choked by the smoke and blinded by the flame. Then Officer Merritt seized three buckets of water and threw them into the cabin, trying to extinguish the burning bulkheads. In another moment the captain and crew were at work on the flames with a couple of fire hose.

All this while the boat was speeding along, and when she had reached Fiftieth-st, the captain found that the fire was steadily gaining on him. 'If the boat had reached Manhattanville before the fire was discovered," he said afterward, "nothing WITHDRAWAL OF PUBLIC MONEY FROM BANKS could have saved her, and we must have per-

Just after passing Fiftieth-st, the river tug Interstate came along and poured two streams of water on the boat. Up to this time the passengers, though much agitated, had behaved with dmirable coolness, the women, as usual, setting violent panic took possession of the passengers. about two hours' work succeeded in getting the flames, which fortunately had not extended beyond the cabin, under control.

In the meantime the tug Manhattan had taken shricks and cries of the women. Captain Beattle.

In the meantime the tug Manhattan had taken In the meantime the tug Manhattan had taken off many of the passengers, while others landed by the pier, being compelled to walk along narrow planks a few inches wide. The majority of them went to Newburg by the West Shore road. Whim the fire was under control, the captain was able to report that there had been no loss of life, or even injury of any kind. The cabin is, of course, destroyed, and a small part of the freight is injured by water. The origin of the fire, which broke out in a disused stateroom of the cabin, is not known, but will probably be traced to the overheating of a boiler.

The Newburgh, which is 210 feet long, 42 feet beam and 730 tons net, was built at Philadelphia in 1886 by Neafle & Levy. She is said to be one of the fastest boats on the river, holding the record of 3 hours 15 minutes for sixty miles

SETTLING HORSE-RACING DISPUTES.

The board of review of the National Tretting Association yesterday resumed the trial of the "Dan" De Noylles case. The dispute in question arises from the #10,000 race trotted at Hartford last summer, and the point contested is whether C. H. Nelson, the owner of the horse "Nelson," or "Dan" De Noylles is entitled to the second money. It was determined that the case should be considered in the way of the period of the contested at the case should be considered in the second money. private executive session, but is had not been decided at a late hour last night. The claim of four running, pushed President Lawrence against P. L. Noble and C. H. case, was also taken up. From The Bangor (Me.) News.

A party of millita men were having a prize shoot one day, turkers being the marks and prizes, when the late Dr. Hardy came along, and they arred him to try his hand. He was a little reluctant to do so, knowing that he could readily outshoot any of them, but finally seceeded and was just aiming an ordinary shotgun loaded with buckshot at one of the turkeys, when he saw an eagle in rapid flight high up in the air. The doctor aimed at the eagle and by a marvellous shot killed it. The royal American bird floated to the ground and all the marksmen looked at Dr. Hardy with awe as a king of sharpshooters. A TALK ON THE REVOLUTIONARY REPUBLIC.

ADMIRAL GHERARDI'S PRACTICAL VIEWS-WEALTH WHICH DOES NOT NEED MAN'S

LABOR-DREAD OF REBELLION.

In a Washington paper it was published a day or two ago that Rear-Admiral Gherardi's frequent visits to Washington had resulted in President Harrison and Secretary Blaine's receiving more information con cerning the people, the products, and the commercial the Republic of Hayti than could be obtained from almost any other sour is true that Admiral Gherardi made himself familiar with all these things when in Havil; that he made eous manner, and won the friendship of Pro-Hyppolite by his able diplomatic advice and aid, and obtain information as to the needs of the Haytians for their improvement. He was asked just before his ressel sailed for Hayti on Tuesday for his views of

"There is nothing I so much protest against as information, but talking is not my forte. My idea of the agricultural condition of Hayti is that nature has done everything that it is possible for the soil. The natives do not seem inclined, or else they do not know cultivation of the lands. In the sense of production labor, there is no such thing as coffee-planting where coffee is one of the leading products. fived, but there is no effort made to keep up the supply The observation and experience of everybody who has been on the Island proves that the natives are not to be credited for the large coffee product, and that its that the seed is distributed by the winds or the birds nearly, if not quite, 75 per cent. The men who grow this, or, rather, who gather it after it has grown, ough to make more money, and would if they could be made ollected from the gatherers in packages of twenty buy up the crop. They, in turn, sell it to the shippers, and then it pays an export tax of 4 cents pound; but this tax is in American gold, or its equivajent, mind you, while all other taxes are paid in Hay tian money. The revenue from the coffee expealone amounts to more than $2,000,000 in American gold annually. Aside from those regular exports, I is estimated that 25 per cent of the coffee pr smuggled to the Bahamas and other islands by the small trading vessels. This is gathered up by negroes to New-York. As the Havtians are great sait eaters, the principal return for this coffee is in salt.

There are also other well-paying products o Hayti. Around Gonaives and St. Marc there are picked about 2,000,000 pounds of cotton a year and all this goes to Europe. As with the coffee, so also the cotton is not cultivated. Then there are large quantities of logwood, mahogany, lignumvitae and other woods common to the tropics. The mahogany wood has been cut off largely except on the islands of annfacturer, the contractor and the trader. There been suggested that an American company with a good are quite a number, as well as a large amount in the aggregate, of loans, the repayment of which the banks may call for in vain; in the meantime, houses having trade paper for discount are referred to the Street for the facilities which banks are established to afford but in cases of pressure it is not often they respond to the demands of their trade customers.

I take great interest in the arguments adduced by your financial editor, and would invite him to pursue will be useful and profitable to all parties outside the "politico-speculative combinations" to which you refer.

working capital could make a fortune for itself and for the Government of Hayti by working these woods, and that Hayti would readily grant a concession to it. The claim of the woman against Hayti, that the island of Tortuga was conceded to her husband, I believe, has been finally settled.

"It is a recognized fact among the most intelligent and conservative people of Hayti that it must be proved to the laboring classes that they lose more than they make by revolutions, that they are the real sufferers. The present Government is inclined to encourage such education, but it must be done in the claim of the woman against Hayti, that the island of the woman against Hayti, that the island of the woman against Hayti, that the laim of the woman against Hayti would readily grant a concession to it. This quickness of concentra about starting rebellions. Then, too, the American line has brought capital to Santo Domingo, which has built no Santo Domingo. Chy, Samma and other ports.

"One result of this concession to Americans has been bee increased production of sugar and molasses in Santo Domingo. In 1884, the production of sugar was 114,600 hundred weight, the production of sugar was 114,600 hundred weight and of molasses. The capots hundred weight in four years the production had increased to 406,142 hundred weight of sugar, and 476,923 hundred weight of molasses. The capots of sucar that year were 26,000 tons, of which quite so per cent came to this country, Havif's importations of goods not produced on the Island, in 1887, amounted in value to $6,845,507, of which $84,250,500 came from this country; and in the same year her exports amounted to $40,185,506, of which not more than ten per cent came to this country. We send quite as much to santo Domingo in proportion to population, but the imports from there are greater.

"Now we want to extend our commercial relations with Havil, or we shall lose what trade we now have with her. We have no such thing as banking facilities, but mist do all of our business through a foreign corporation, to which we pay a big revenue. There is, practically, only one banking house in Havil, a French bank at Portan Prince. Its power with the Government is tremendous. It stands in the position to Havil that the Bank of England does to England. It has agents in every town, collects all the revenues, pays out on drafts from the Treasurer and charges big sees for so doing.

Another thing for us Americans to consider is the Social relations. If found the Havilans, as a rule, pays out on drafts from the Treasurer and charges big fees for so doing.

Another thing for us Americans to consider is the social relations. I found the Haytlans, as a rule, and especially the women, as phasant, as agreeable, as well educated and as dignified as any in our own country. They have wealth and position in nearly every country but our own, and we are inclined to look upon them as beneath our notice. I frequently hear them spoken of as 'Haytlan ningers.' This is a great missake and everybody who becomes acquainted with them soon finds it out. I know of a lady in this city now, the wife of a member of one of the largest mercantile houses in Haytl, who is ostracked, frowned upon, treated with indignity almost. She is a white woman if she has dark skin. Many of these people have assured me that if they come to New York, to any of its hotels, they are almost isolated from the other guests in the assignment of rooms, and at the table, they are stared at, almost insuffed, and are not received in society. We must live above this sore of thing."

FIELD TRIALS AT LEXINGTON, N. C. Lexington, N. C., Dec. 4.—The run for the Setter Derby Stake was ended to-day. The first prize was won by Harry C., owned by the Memphis and Avent Kennels, of Memphis, Tenn. The second prize was won by Sam C., owned by Dr. Glover, of New-York. The first series of the reinter Derby was closed. Tough Nut ran against Nasc Peshali Heinken against Flint, and Rip Rap against Met Lady Hessen ran atone. The second series of the Pointer Berby will begin to-morrow. With the exception of Rip Rap's ranging, there was nothing notable about the performance of the dogs, but all the work was modern

GEORGE KENNAN ON SIBERIAN PRISONS. George Rennan delivered one of his brillant and in-ensely interesting lectures last night to a large andience in Calvary Bajriss Church. His subject was "The Mines and Prisons of Eastern Siberia," and he told in a graphic way the story of his visit to those dreary hor sian political exites. He donned the prison dress of the convicts, and were that costume while he gave his reminis-cences of his meetings with some of the convicts, affected cith great difficulty, and his talks with them. The Rus-cian Ravolutionists, he said, found in the United States of America the ideal of their country's future destiny.

CONSOLED FOR HIS LOSS.

From The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin,
The romantic manner in which a prominent Irishman was disappointed in a matrimonial venture, has been an open secret among his friends for some time, several years ago he fell in love with a bright, handsome young girl, and undertook to bear the expense of her education, with the idea of making her his wiffulfimately. He sent her away to complete her musical and literary studies. While absent, she and a young gentleman that she happened to meet, conceived an affection for each other, and became engaged. Their marriage was only a question of a short time. The young lady's benefactor was grievously disappointed, but he accepted the situation like a man, and, acting
